Where Best Practice Begins

When it comes to understanding the business of energy, the C. T. Bauer College of Business at the University of Houston is where best practice begins.

Bauer College's Global Energy Management Institute (GEMI) hosted its annual symposium recently, focusing on reliability and security across the energy value chain and bringing more than 20 panelists from various sectors of the industry to share their perspectives with attendees. The daylong conference offered sessions on regulation, infrastructure, contracts and financing, and risk management, along with a keynote from C. Gregory Harper, a Bauer MBA alumnus and president of gas pipelines and processing at Enbridge.

As energy professionals are required to navigate huge shifts, our ties to the industry and resources for education and development are preparing today's workforce while exploring the possibilities of the future. We are Bauer, and we are your business connection.

C. T. Bauer College of Business is an AACSB accredited business school.

The University of Houston is an EEO/AA institution.
