Brian Fleming is a native of Monroe, LA where he graduated from the University of Louisiana at Monroe with a degree in Business Management and Finance. Prior to his career in finance, Brian served as an infantry platoon sergeant in the US Marine Corps until his retirement in 2003. It was after serving in the Marines that he began his banking profession. Working for large financial institutions, he has served as branch manager, adviser to commercial customers, business lender, manager of a commercial loan portfolio, and performed financial reviews geared toward finding deficiencies and providing financial solutions. He continued to expand his knowledge by completing professional development courses for small businesses and commercial lenders including the MZ BIERLY Business Lenders Curriculum and RMA courses.

At BAFS, you will find Brian managing the Credit Underwriting Department, as well as performing pre-credit and financial analysis for some of our largest credit unions. Since joining BAFS he has quickly grasped our process, which has resulted in him being contacted by our partner credit unions to assist with structure, construction loan guidance or general loan questions on new, prospective or current business loans. He is instrumental in the coordination of educational workshops for Credit Union staff training, business development workshops and serves as a consultant regarding the structure of new business ventures. Brian provides assistance to Commercial Credit Committee Members regarding Business Member or Participation loan questions and is a source for answers during any third party or NCUA reviews.
