A man, Mireo Latham, is standing in a warehouse or distribution center. He is wearing a dark-colored Wal-Mart polo shirt with the company logo on the chest and a star patch on the sleeve. He is smiling slightly and looking towards the camera. The background is filled with industrial shelving and bright overhead lights, creating a sense of a busy work environment.

“When people believe they can do excellent work, they’re likely to produce excellent work.”

WHERE BUSINESS MEETS PERSONAL PASSION

Mireo Latham was doing fine in his role as a general manager at a Wal-Mart. But he decided fine wasn’t good enough – he wanted to be involved in decision-making and strategy, not just tactics. So, he went to Bauer to earn his Executive MBA from Bauer College.

“Understanding team dynamics and trying to get four to five strong-willed individuals to work in unison definitely teaches the art of leadership,” he says.

He graduated in 2014, and in 2015 his Wal-Mart team received the company’s coveted Import Distribution Center of the Year award. That earned Latham a promotion to a facility in Sealy, Texas, where today he leads 72 managers and more than 875 associates. He credits the leadership skills he learned at Bauer for helping to enable his success.
