

OUR CITY, OUR COLLEGE

Students Commercialize Technology

Undergraduate students from the nationally ranked Cyvia and Melvyn Wolff Center for Entrepreneurship at the C. T. Bauer College of Business at the University of Houston have partnered with researchers on campus to develop business plans that commercialize technology projects that address water filtration, clean energy storage and medical innovations, among other areas.

These student teams have won four business plan competitions this year against international competition, including teams of MBA and science graduate students, with additional podium finishes and prizes — a tribute to the university's innovative research and to Bauer College's leading entrepreneurship program.

One reason Houston is booming is thanks to the entrepreneurial culture of the city. As Houston's business school, we know that there is no better place for our students to learn about entrepreneurship than this city.

We are Houston, and we are your business connection.
